

Sox Sperry began his career as a teacher and curriculum designer in 1974 working at the Learning Center parent-teacher cooperative in Fort Wayne, Indiana. Since 1984 he has worked at the Center For Nonviolence in Fort Wayne where he teaches nonviolence and develops curriculum for a batterers' intervention program. He also teaches peace studies and oversees curriculum for the Three Rivers Jenbe Ensemble. His writing on non-violence curriculum development will be included in the forthcoming book, Authentic Movement: Moving the Body, Moving the Self, edited by Patrizia Pallaro and to be published by Jessica Kingsley.

Chris Sperry is the director of curriculum and staff development for Project Look Sharp, and has taught social studies, visual sociology, and media production at the middle and high school levels for the past 25 years at the Alternative Community School, in Ithaca, New York. He has developed specific media literacy curriculum materials around the study of Africa and Native American cultures. He is also author of Media Construction of War: A Critical Reading of History published in 2003. He won the 2005 National PTA and Cable's Leaders in Learning Award for media literacy.
