Community outreach:

Recipient of Grants: $20,500 to develop a music program for underrepresented and disenfranchised students in the Ithaca community. This program is a collaboration between the Greater Ithaca Activities Center (GIAC), Ithaca College faculty and students, and a number of respected community musicians and educators. It is designed to provide young people served by GIAC with an opportunity to participate in multicultural music and arts education that will include private and small group instruction, public performances, and attendance at a wide range of professional performances and workshops in the area, especially at Ithaca College. A key goal of the program is to help youth develop socially and cognitively in a way that will lead them to an interest in continued exploration and learning and greater academic achievement. Summer, 2004, assistant director of a music camp for disenfranchised youth at the Southside Community Center in Ithaca, New York.
