

JAMES MADISON FELLOWSHIP

The James Madison Memorial Fellowship Foundation awards fellowships to future secondary school teachers of American history, American government, and social studies in grades 7-12. The foundation awards James Madison Fellowships to college seniors and graduates who will normally enroll respectively in full and part-time graduate study. These students must pursue a master's degree in either: American history or political science, a degree of Master of Arts in Teaching in history or social studies, or a related master's degree in education that permits a concentration in American history, American government, social studies, or political science.

Award

Junior fellows are eligible for a maximum of $24,000 for up to two years of full-time study. Fellowships do not support study toward doctoral degrees or teaching certificates.

Eligibility

Applicant must:

- ◆ Be an U.S. citizen or U.S. national, possessing a bachelor's degree or planning to receive a degree no later than August 31, of the year in which he or she is applying.
- ◆ Agree to teach full-time in a secondary school for no less than one year for each full academic year of study under a fellowship in the subject fields of American History, American Government or Social Studies.
