EASTHAMA

Lindsey Eastham and Hiromu Nagahama make up the award-winning international marimba duo, EASTHAMA. Their partnership began at California State University Northridge in January of 2014 as they pursued their Bachelor of Music degrees. In June of 2014, they won first place at the Southern California International Marimba Competition, competing against duos from around the world. Since then, they have performed as a part of the Southern California Marimba Concert Series and hosted several recitals at Cal State Northridge and Ithaca College. In May of 2016, they taught a masterclass at Cal Poly Pomona on techniques for preparing repertoire and arranging as a duo as part of their "Percussion in the Music Industry" masterclass series. In the summer of 2017 they will be touring as members of the World Percussion Group where they will present recitals and masterclasses at conservatories in the United Kingdom, Finland, Sweden, Estonia, Belgium, Norway and Denmark.

EASTHAMA is passionate about creating unique interpretations of well-known repertoire as well as premiering new works and original arrangements. In January 2016, the duo premiered a new work for vibraphone and marimba by Gordon Stout, as well as their original arrangement of Ravel's Mother Goose Suite for marimba, percussion, and electronics at the Southern California Marimba Concert Series.

Lindsey Eastham grew up in Claremont, CA where she became involved with music at the age of four and began playing percussion at the age of 13. Lindsey graduated from Cal State Northridge in May of 2016 with a Bachelor's degree in percussion performance and is pursuing her master's degree at Ithaca College. She is a former student of John Magnussen, Aaron Smith and Naoko Takada, and currently studies with Gordon Stout.

Hiromu Nagahama is from Fukuoka, Japan, and he started playing percussion at age 12 in middle school. After receiving his first bachelor's degree in English literature at Ritsumeikan University in Kyoto, Japan, Hiromu moved to California in 2008. After studying for 3 years at Riverside Community College, he transferred to California State University in Northridge to pursue a degree in music. He has studied with John Magnussen, Aaron Smith and Naoko Takada. He returned to Japan after his graduation in the spring 2014, but is now a graduate student studying with Gordon Stout at Ithaca College in New York.

Program Notes

Rozmyślenia przy fontannie (Contemplations at the Fountain)

Maciej Małecki (b. November 27, 1940 Warsaw)

Program note provided by the composer

Contemplations at the Fountain (Double Concerto for Vibraphone, Marimba and Orchestra) was written in the summer of 2010 for the husband/wife percussion duo Hob-beats (Magdalena Kordylasińska and Miłosz Pękala). The world premiere of the work took place during my jubilee concert in November of the same year. The title of the work was born at a fountain near which I experienced a palette of different emotions - thoughtfulness, doubts and hope. The duo Hob-beats performed the piece twice more with other symphony orchestras in Poland.

Composer's biography written by Keehun Nam

Małecki was born in Warsaw in 1940 and studied composition and piano at the Frederic Chopin Academy of Music. He continued his studies at Eastman School of Music in Rochester, and he began his composition career by writing music for the theatre, TV, radio, and movies in the 1970s. Beginning in the '80s, he changed his focus to the concert hall. From 1991 to 1999, he served the Polish Composers' Association initially as vice-president until 1993 and then as president.

Cello Concerto No. 1 in E $\flat$ Major, op. 107

Dmitri Shostakovich (b. September 25, 1906 Saint Petersburg - d. August 9, 1975 Moscow)

Shostakovich, like J. S. Bach, is famous for encoding and weaving their names into their music. For Bach, it was his full last name: BACH. In Germany, the letter "B" stands for B $\flat$  and "H" stands for B $\sharp$ . Therefore, his signature motif was B $\flat$ -C-A-B $\sharp$ . Shostakovich did not have this luxury and had to get creative with his name to be able to encode it into his music. He chose the following four letters to serve as his musical initials: DSCH. (In Germany, the letter "S" is understood as "Es" which means E $\flat$ .) It is not by coincidence that the two sound so similar—Shostakovich looked up to and was heavily inspired by J. S. Bach.

The cello concerto begins with a statement of a DSCH-like melody. While the cello's first four notes are not DSCH, or even an anagram of it, those four notes sounds so similar that it still evokes the DSCH-motif. Shostakovich transforms the first four notes into its various different guises throughout the work. This concerto was written for one of Shostakovich's friends—Mstislav Rostropovich, one of the greatest cellists of the 20th century.

Piano Concerto No. 3 in C Major, op. 26

Sergei Prokofiev (b. April 23, 1891 Krasne, Ukraine
- March 5, 1953 Saint Petersburg)

Prokofiev was born in a remote, rural region in Ukraine near Donetsk (which you may recognize from the recent events involving Ukrainian separatists and Russia). His mother, Maria Zhitkova (who was a serf—a slave), was educated as a child by her owners in theatre and the arts. It was her piano practicing at night that inspired the young Prokofiev to start composing at the age of seven.

This piano concerto began in 1913 when he was still enrolled at the Saint Petersburg Conservatory (where he was their best piano student). It was completed in 1921 when he moved to Paris from San Francisco where he had gone following the colossal success of his first ballet, The Fool.

This first movement begins with a famous clarinet melody which becomes the lyrical counterweight to the significantly more dissonant and virtuosic second theme. You can see and hear Prokofiev's amazing flexibility in going in between such diverse styles of music, and it is this flexibility that poses such a big challenge to both the orchestra and the soloist. Nevertheless, it has become one of his most popular works.

Romeo and Juliet Fantasy-Overture

Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky (b. April 25, 1840 Udmurtia
- d. October 25, 1893 Saint Petersburg)

Program note adapted from Phillip Huscher's notes for Chicago Symphony's concert on September 19, 2010.

No other play by Shakespeare has inspired as many composers as Romeo and Juliet. More than twenty operas have been written on Romeo and Juliet, and Bernstein's urban West Side Story suggests that the fascination with this subject hasn't waned in our own time. And Prokofiev's 1940 ballet is now recognized as a twentieth-century classic. But none of these works has surpassed the popularity of Tchaikovsky's fantasy-overture. Russian composer Mily Balakirev apparently first suggested the play to Tchaikovsky as early as the summer of 1869. Surprisingly, Tchaikovsky found his own voice with this work; Romeo and Juliet, a "Fantasy-Overture after Shakespeare," is his first masterpiece.

In 1878, while he was recuperating from his failed marriage at his brother Modest's house, Tchaikovsky turned to Romeo and Juliet and was struck by its potential as a great operatic subject. Seldom in Tchaikovsky's music are form and content as well matched as in Romeo and Juliet. The contrast between family strife and the lovers' passion ideally lends itself to sonata form, with two dramatically contrasted themes; the conflict assures a fierce and combative development section. Tchaikovsky begins as Balakirev recommended, with solemn and fateful chords that suggest the calm, knowing voice of Friar Lawrence. The street music is noisy and action-packed. The famous love theme begins innocently in the English Horn and Violas; it was one of Tchaikovsky's boldest moves to save the big statement of this great melody, fully orchestrated and greatly extended—the way most listeners remember it—for much later, at the climax of the recapitulation. The lovers' music returns once again in the coda, signaled by the timpani's dying heartbeat, but there it sounds cold and lifeless.
