You, Me, and the Violence (formerly titled Inanimate Subjects). An investigative and lyrical book-length essay that explores feelings of powerlessness with reference to puppets and military drones (including interviews with my brother, a U.S. Air Force drone pilot) and puppets. Work on this book won residencies at MacDowell, Yaddo, and the Millay Colony. Forthcoming with the 21st Century Essays Series at Ohio State University Press in 2017.

Apart. (Ugly Duckling Presse, 2012). A book-length series of lyric and documentary essays examining apartheid-era and contemporary South Africa through the lens of personal and political histories. Research conducted in the field and at the Centre for African Studies at The University of Cape Town. Brian Teare writes, "Catherine Taylor's Apart is neither journalism nor memoir nor documentary poem nor lyric essay nor jeremiad—though it contains elements of them all—but a brilliant and relentless examination of conscience always in search of a literary form adequate to its mission." Second Edition Published Fall 2016.

Giving Birth: a Journey into the World of Mothers and Midwives (Penguin Putnam, NY, 2002). Winner of the Lamaze International Birth Advocate Award, 2003. Library Journal called it "a blend of scholarship, exposé, and storytelling that is likely to become a classic."
