Course description:

Study and application of the techniques necessary for coherent expression in creative musical work. Students are assigned original compositions to explore motivic, harmonic, and formal design, as well as style, idiom, and orchestration, in order to create effective and meaningful works. Registration is based on previous written work and the permission of the instructor. Private tutorial instruction and one class meeting per week. 3 credits. (F-S)

Student Learning Outcomes:

At the end of this course, the student will:

- demonstrate the ability to compose music that displays creativity.
- demonstrate the ability to compose music that is technically adept.
- demonstrate the ability to compose music in a variety of media and genres.
- demonstrate the ability to compose music that is musically sophisticated.
- demonstrate the ability to compose music that displays professional notation/presentation.

Attendance policies:

Attendance is mandatory for all lessons, seminars (Wednesdays 12:00-12:50) and all required events per the policies in the Composition Handbook. The student is expected to show up for his/her weekly lesson at the arranged day and time. There will be no changes to this arranged time once the semester begins. Make-up lessons will be offered under special circumstances only (student's illness or family emergency, instructor's unavailability due to travel). Students are responsible for making up the missed work. Tardy arrivals will be counted as absences. Two absences will negatively affect the final grade.

Please refer to the Ithaca College attendance policies below.

If extra help is needed, the student is welcome to come in during the instructor's office hours.

Course activities:

Compositional work, ancillary exercises on specific techniques, listening and analysis of works from the literature.

Assignments:

It is expected from the student to complete all composition projects by the final exam date or the last day of classes.

Composition Seminar:

All composition majors are required to attend weekly Composition Seminar. Seminar offers an excellent opportunity to interact with other composition students and attend lectures/presentations by established composers.

Composition Premieres Concerts:

All composition majors are required to present at least one work in one of the Composition Premieres concerts each semester.

Entrepreneurship:

The instructor encourages students to seek opportunities to expose their work on and off campus. Entrepreneurial activities for an emerging composer include, but are not limited to submitting scores to off-campus performers/ensembles, festivals, calls-for-scores and competitions; engaging in interdisciplinary collaborative projects, participating in new music events; and starting/maintaining a composer's website. Students are required to submit a list of semester entrepreneurial activities by Monday of finals week, via e-mail.

Grading:

Composition projects (and required performance)	85%
Attendance*	10%
Entrepreneurship	5%

* = see Attendance Policies

Compositions will be graded based on its creativity, technique, successful structure shape and form, idiomatic awareness, sophistication of the compositional language used, and notation.

E-mail Communication:

Students are strongly advised to check their IC e-mail account periodically. The instructor will only send e-mail communications to IC accounts.

AI Use:

This class, and composition instruction in general terms, is designed to help you develop the creative imagination, technical skills, musical judgment, and individual artistic voice necessary to become an independent composer and artist. The work you produce in this course is not simply an exercise in generating musical material; it is part of the process through which you discover how you think, hear, create, revise, and make artistic decisions.

For this reason, the use of generative artificial intelligence (AI) to create, generate, transform, or substantially develop musical material is not permitted in this course.

This policy applies to AI systems that generate musical ideas, melodies, harmonies, rhythms, formal structures, orchestrations, scores, or other compositional material, as well as systems that substantially alter or develop your own musical work.

College Academic Policies and Resources

Attendance Policy

Students at Ithaca College are expected to attend all classes, and they are responsible for work missed during any absence from class. For all absences except those due to religious beliefs, the course instructor has the right to determine if the number of absences has been excessive in view of the nature of the class that was missed and the stated attendance policy. Students should notify their instructors as soon as possible of any anticipated absences. At the beginning of each semester, instructors must provide the students in their courses with written guidelines regarding possible penalties for failure to attend class. These guidelines may vary from course to course; see Attendance Policy for more detailed information.

Accommodations for Students

In accordance with Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and the Americans with Disabilities Act, reasonable accommodations will be provided to qualified students with documented disabilities through an interactive process. Students seeking accommodations must register with Student Accessibility Services and provide appropriate documentation before accommodations can be provided. Please note that accommodations are not retroactive, so timely contact with Student Accessibility Services (SAS) is encouraged. To discuss accommodations or the accommodation process, students should schedule to meet with a SAS specialist. |

Ithaca College Standards of Academic Conduct |

The Ithaca College Policy Manual describes the Standards of Academic Content embedded in the Student Code of Conduct. It is the responsibility of every student and faculty member to be familiar with, and comply with, these expectations for rigor, authenticity, trust, and honesty in academic work. We will discuss this policy more thoroughly in our course. As the Policy Manual states, “Because Ithaca College is an academic community, ignorance of the accepted standards of academic honesty in no way affects the responsibility of students who violate standards of conduct in courses and other academic activities.” |

Mental Health and Stress Management Support via CAPS: |

The Ithaca College Center for Counseling and Psychological Services (CAPS) promotes and fosters the academic, personal, and interpersonal development of Ithaca College students by providing short-term individual, group, and relationship counseling, crisis intervention, educational programs to the campus community, and consultation for faculty, staff, parents, and students. CAPS sees students in-person at their offices in the Hammond Health building (side entrance), but Telehealth meetings through Zoom can be arranged in some circumstances. You may reach out by phone 607-274-3136 or email: counseling@ithaca.edu. |

Title IX |

Please note that if you disclose to your professor any experience related to sex-based harassment (including sexual assault, dating violence, and/or stalking, sexual harassment or sex and gender-based discrimination), your professor will inform the Title IX Coordinator, lkoenig@ithaca.edu, of all relevant information, including your name. The Title IX Coordinator may contact you to inform you of certain rights and resources and the College may take initial steps to address health or safety concerns. The college will take initial steps to address the incident(s), protect, and support those directly affected, and enhance the safety of our community. The Title IX Coordinator will work with you to determine the best way to proceed. Please also be aware that if you disclose to your professor that you are pregnant or have a pregnancy related condition, your professor should make you aware of the Title IX Coordinator’s name and contact information, Linda Koenig (lkoenig@ithaca.edu) so that you may contact her to discuss available supportive resources and rights. Your professor will also direct you to <https://www.ithaca.edu/sexual-harassment-and-assault-response-education/supportive-resources-and-options/information-pregnant-students> to help you be aware of your rights and resources. Information shared in class assignments, class discussions, and at public events do not constitute an official disclosure, and faculty and staff do not have to report these to the Title IX Coordinator. Faculty and staff should be sure that access to campus and community resources related to sexual misconduct are available to students in the case these subjects do arise. Any other disclosure to faculty and staff needs to be reported to the Title IX Coordinator. For more information: <https://www.ithaca.edu/share>.

Academic Advising Availability

Students are asked to consult with their faculty advisor or professional staff within the Academic Support Center for all advising matters. Faculty advisors assist students with most advising questions, and they collaborate with staff in the Academic Support Center. Students can find the name of their assigned faculty advisor in Homer or in Degree Works. Students can email staff within the Academic Support Center (academicsupport@ithaca.edu).
